Syllabus

Instructor: Terry Briley
Classroom: Ezell 207

COURSE DESCRIPTION
This course will equip students to become competent and responsible interpreters of Old Testament texts so that they may aid their Christian community in hearing the word of God from these texts. In addition, this course will prepare students to move from the meaning of individual Old Testament texts to develop a broader theological understanding of God, as well as the relationship of humanity to God and God’s redemptive purpose.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES FOR THE COURSE
Students completing this course will be able to:

1) Assess the role of contextualization in understanding and applying OT texts;
2) Assess the role of literary genre in understanding and applying OT texts;
3) Appreciate the contributions of the diverse voices and tensions within the OT text;
4) Trace the developing role of humanity in God’s redemptive purpose in the OT;
5) Recognize the OT’s independent witness, as well as its foundational relationship to the NT.

COURSE REQUIREMENTS
1) Regular attendance (no more than one class meeting should be missed; except under extreme circumstances, missing more than two class meetings may result in dismissal from the class); preparation of weekly readings/responses; appropriate participation in class - 20%
2) Mid-term and final exams - 25% each
3) Research paper - 30%

The weekly reading responses are not primarily summaries or reflections (personal/emotional reactions). The goal is not to indicate how much the student liked or disliked the reading, but an understanding of the content of the reading and its relevance for the course objectives. Each response should include questions prompted by the reading that might be raised in the class discussion. The response should be roughly one page (double spaced) in length, but students who are reluctant to participate in class discussions may opt to write more.

Appropriate participation has the following characteristics: A) Respectful of fellow students and the teacher; B) Openness to differing views from fellow students and the teacher; C) Relevant to the subject at hand; D) Not so lengthy or frequent as to inhibit the progress of the class or the participation of others.

Detailed guidelines for the research paper will be given at the proper time in class.
